CREED

Celebrating its 250th anniversary, Paris-based CREED royal perfume house will be opening a 400-square-foot boutique on Madison Avenue (its only stand-alone store in the U.S.), just in time for the 2009 holiday season. Be sure to sample Windsor, the fragrance CREED made for the Duke of Windsor in 1936, which is now being released in very limited quantities in leather-wrapped bottles (320 total) and laser-numbered decanters (just 70 made). $405 and $605, (877) 273-3344, creedboutique.com — Nicole Alper

The image shows the interior of a CREED perfume boutique. The walls are white and feature several shelves displaying various perfume bottles. The bottles are arranged in rows and are illuminated from below. In the foreground, there are two modern, light-colored chairs. The overall aesthetic is clean and minimalist.
